The Cause of Bilious Complaints and a Mode of Cure.

and a Mode of Cure.

A well regulated and proportionate quantity of bile upon the stomach is always requisite for the promotion of sound health—it stimulates digestion, and keeps the intestinal canal free from all obstructions. On the inferior surface of the liver is a peculiar biadder, in which the bile is first preserved, being formed by the liver from the blood. Thence it passes into the stomach and intestines, and regulates the digestion. Thus we see when there is a deficiency of hile, the body is constantly costive. On the other hand any overshundance of hile causes frequent nauscal in the stomach, and often promotes very severs attacks of disease, which sometimes ends in death.

Fevers are always preceded by symptoms of a disordered stomach; as are also scrofulous disorders, and ordered stomach; as are also scrotulous disorders, and all sympathetic functional organic or febrile diseases. From the same cause, the natural and healthy action of the heart, and the whole vascular system is impair ed and reduced below its natural standard, as exhibsted in palpitations. languid pulse, torpors of the limbs syscope, and even death itself, in consequence of an exerabandance of a peculiar offensive substance

Moffat's Life Pills and Phenix Bitters.

The universal estimation in which the celebrated Life Pells and Phenix Bitters are held, is suitsfactorily domonstrated by the increasing demand for them in every state and section of the Union, and by the voluntary testimonials to their remarkable efficacy which are everywhere offered. THE author of the above works has been pro A fessionally devoted to the science of Geography and the publishing of Maps during many years—and his former productions, especially his maps of the U. States, and late Map of the world for Academies &c. beer ample testimony of his abundant resources, up n which he has so liberally drawn, in producing the shove school works. The following extract of the Geography and Atlas, is from a joint recommendation of the teach ers in the city of New York. "Their merits are numerous-the definitions remarkably plain and concine. The exercises are copious and impor-tant, and the descriptive department is luminous and correct. The divisions of the American continent, are represented and described as they really exist at the present time. And the gross misstatements generally found in school geographies are corrected. The typographical execu-tion is uncommonly neat and distinct, indeed the atlas is a model of the kind, and actually teems with information." The outline maps are te-ms with information. The outline maps are peculiarly calculated to exercise the student in ins study, and to fill up at his lessure. Of the Georraphical Reader, the following is from the Rev.
